Post-Disaster Needs Assessment

The post-disaster and needs assessment methodology, which was initially developed by the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC, 2003), is increasingly recognized as the standard for recovery and reconstruction assessment at national levels. The ECLAC methodology was further refined, expanded, operationalized and documented in the guidelines for damage, loss and needs assessment (GFDRR, 2010). At present, this methodology is the internationally accepted approach in assessing post-disaster damages, losses and needs. It has been used following disasters in various countries like Bangladesh, Myanmar, Lao PDR and the Philippines.

Organization

The assessment should be led and owned by the government and can be supported by development partners. If the disaster area covers one region, the OCD Regional Office can lead the PDNA with other regional agencies.

The PDNA involves many agencies and expertise. From the onset, responsibilities should be clear as to which agency or person/s will gather or contribute what information as well as the deadlines for providing this information.

Initiation and Timing

The PDNA should be initiated by the government. The government should decide whether or not a full-blown PDNA is needed after a disaster. This decision can be initiated based on certain criteria, such as the number of provinces and people that have been affected, the scope and extent of effects on specific sectors and a presidential declaration of a national state of calamity or emergency.

The PDNA should not begin until humanitarian assistance stage is completed or well underway. In the initial stages after a disaster, priority must be given to emergency assistance and resources are usually utilized for emergency activities. However, the assessment should not be unnecessarily delayed as there is an urgent need to elicit support from the international community, whose attention may quickly be diverted in other parts of the world. Similarly, the national government must soon have an overview of funding and resources required for recovery and reconstruction.

In carrying out a PDNA, there should be a balance between speed and accuracy. Speed is more important than 100% accuracy. Nevertheless, a PDNA should aim for highest possible accuracy under the given circumstances by combining the best available professionals, best available information and an adequate and reliable methodological tool for assessment.

Composition of the assessment team

The composition of the assessment team depends on the sectors to be assessed. Since it makes estimations of destruction of physical assets and of changes in the flow of socio-economic activities, the team should include architects and engineers, sociologists, economists, statistician and experts in the sector that will be assessed. It should also include other professionals that are well acquainted with the assessment methodology and with the socio-economic conditions of the affected areas.

From the government side, officials belonging to the line agencies covering all sectors of the economy, such as those from the statistical agency, finance, economic and social planning agencies, should participate in the assessment. Their respective roles and tasks will depend on their institutional mandate and structure. The steps in undertaking a PDNA for specific sectors are discussed in the Guidance Notes.

Data collection for a PDNA

One of the most important tasks of the assessment team is the collection of accurate and reliable data. This can be challenging, especially in a post-disaster situation, and more so if pre-disaster base data may not be readily available for several sectors. The assessment team should consider as many sources of data as possible, such as online data (news and publications, databases, maps, remote sensing data, etc.), official publications from for instance the National Statistics Office, internal documents of departments and ministries, experts, local staff of government offices and NGOs, etc. During field visits it is also important to make visual observations of damages and losses, in addition to data collection at municipal and barangay offices. If no data can be found, expert opinion and estimates can be used, though it is always important to clearly state data sources when reporting.

Area of Coverage in PDNA TY Yolanda

Seven (7) teams were organized from the National, Regional and Local Government Units to cover the following areas:

1. Tacloban City
2. Eastern Samar
3. Leyte
4. Western Samar, Biliran and Southern Leyte
5. Northern Palawan and Northern Cebu
6. Aklan and Antique
7. Iloilo and Capiz

Assumptions

- Municipalities covered by PDNA were within the 50-km radius of the Typhoon Yolanda track as identified by DOST
- Data representation underwent field validation
- Cost valuation was based on standard costing, local assessments and agreed assumptions.
- If no data can be found during the field validation, professional estimates were applied by experts.

Limitations

- Due to time constraints and the need for field validation, some data are not completely represented in the report.

The results of the PDNA suggests that the total effect of the event amounts to approximately PhP 132.4 billion pesos with damage accounting for 68% and losses 32%.

Damage and Losses Assessment

Typhoon Yolanda resulted to a total damage of PhP 89,598,068,634.88 and estimated amount of losses of PhP 42,759,630,025.90. The amount of damage and losses per sector are as follows:

Infrastructure

Total estimated damage to infrastructure is PhP9,584,596,305.69 and estimated amount of losses is PhP2,614,192,306.24. This sector accounted for all structures such as roads, bridges, irrigation facilities, flood control/seawall and all infrastructures related to education, power, water facility, telecommunications and government.

Productive

Total estimated damage to productive sector is PhP21,833,622,975.09 and estimated amount of losses is PhP29,530,908,491.52. This sector covers Agriculture, Tourism, Mining, and Industry, Trade and Services.

Social

Total estimated damage to social sector is PhP55,110,825,740.69 and estimated amount of losses is PhP6,219,786,649.55. This sector focuses on the frontline services of the government towards society/community. This includes three (3) sub-sectors: housing, health and education.

Cross-Sectoral

Total estimated damage to cross-sectoral is PhP3,069,023,613.41 and estimated amount of losses is PhP4,394,742,578.59. This includes four (4) sub-sectors: Government and DRRM, Macroeconomics, Social Impact Assessment and Environment
